Anne Schaeffer Plachta

MAY 11, 1925 - MAY 29, 2015

Anne Mary Schaeffer Plachta loved living happily in La Jolla, California since 1968. Before moving to The Shores, she resided in Pacific Palisades and the towns of Wellesley and Boston, Massachusetts. Anne enjoyed many volunteer activities including The Social Service League of La Jolla, Darlington House, and San Diego Humane Society. She was born and raised in Reading, Massachusetts and graduated Wellesley College, Class of 1946. In her leisure hours, she raised roses, toiled around town in her favorite antique cars, walked to the pier and back every morning providing doggie treats and meeting friends for exercise class and breakfast at the La Jolla Beach and Tennis Club. Her daughter, Sally Plachta, and husband, Robert (Bob) Plachta, predeceased her. She will be missed by her niece, Anne Schaeffer Sinn, Anne's husband, Kirk, and their three children and five grandchildren. Rest in Peace, Aunt Anne! Since Anne loved animals, please consider a donation to the San Diego Humane Society, to perpetuate her love and care for cats and dogs, or to the charity of your choice. <http://www.sdhumane.org/donate> 619-299-7012 ( then for donations press 5)

Molly Shor posted:

From Joan B. Shor's unpublished autobiography. She was Anne's Wellesley College classmate: "Two girls from Reading MA (Anne Plachta and Gloria Shane) became special friends. Anne and I overlapped in several courses and ended up psych majors and roommates for three years. Between the two of them, I never was left on campus during Thanksgiving or Easter vacations. I visited Anne's home so often that her family called her brother's room "Richard and Joby's room". A lowly lieutenant JG, Richard, during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, was credited with putting his destroyer out to sea as the senior officer aboard, thus saving her from being sunk. Though we never occupied "our" room at the same time, it did startle his fiance to hear it so-called when she first visited his family." Molly Shor
