When I was a young boy, 12, 13, 14 Uncle Stan who worked for Convair, would send me posters of U.S. fighters made by Convair and other U.S. companies. I would place them all on the walls of our apartment in the Bronx. My grandfather was the Superintendent of our building. One Christmas at Grandmas, where all children (cousins), aunts and uncles etc, were there, Uncle Stan and I were sitting alone at the dinner table (dinner had not yet been served)). He knew I was interested in jet fighter aircraft and asked me if I understood how and why planes could fly. Of course I didn't and was curious as to how. He then explained to me how the pressure of air over and under the planes wings gave the plane "Lift" and gave it the ability to fly. He explained it in such a clear and simple way that even a young boy could understand. I have never forgotten that. In his way as well as my DaD, they fostered in me a desire to serve my country in uniform. I was fortunate to graduate from West Point, and serve as an Infantry Officer in Germany, Vietnam and the U.S. Please accept my deepest and sincerest Condolences on the loss of your DaD and Grandfather.
